Section A: Greek Tragedy

Answer Question 1 and either Question 2 or Question 3.

- 1 Read the passage and answer the question.

The Chorus remember the sacrifice of Iphigenia.

CHORUS: ...and the bridle chokes her voice... her saffron robes pouring over the sand

her glance like arrows showering wounding every murderer through with pity clear as a picture, live,

5

she strains to call their names...
I remember often the days with father's guests
when over the feast her voice unbroken, pure as the hymn her loving father bearing third libations, sang to Saving Zeus—transfixed with joy, Atreus' offspring throbbing out their love.

What comes next? I cannot see it, cannot say.
The strong techniques of Calchas do their work.
But Justice turns the balance scales,
sees that we suffer
and we suffer and we learn.

15

And we will know the future when it comes.
Greet it too early, weep too soon.
It all comes clear in the light of day.
Let all go well today, well as she could want,

20

Turning to CLYTAEMNESTRA.

our midnight watch, our lone defender,
single-minded queen.

(Aeschylus, Agamemnon)

Section B: Homeric Epic

Answer Question 4 and either Question 5 or Question 6.

- 4 Read the passage and answer the question.

Hector on the other side leapt from his chariot to the ground, and the two fought for Cebriones like a pair of lions on the mountain heights, each as hungry and fearless as the other, disputing the dead body of a stag. So, with the body of Cebriones between them, these two champions of the battle-cry, Patroclus and glorious Hector, longed to hack into each other's flesh with their cruel spears. Hector got hold of Cebriones' head and never once let go; Patroclus, at his end, clung to a foot; and the rest of the Trojans and Greeks joined in the fierce confrontation. Like the east and south winds tussling with one another in a mountain glen, setting the dense wood heaving, beech and ash and smooth-barked cornel: their long boughs lash each other with a terrifying sound, and the branches snap noisily – so the Trojans and Greeks leapt at one another and destroyed. There was no thought of fatal flight on either side. The ground where Cebriones fell was peppered with sharp spears and feathered arrows that had leapt from the bowstring; huge rocks struck shields and sent staggering those that fought about him. And there great Cebriones lay, in a swirl of dust, great even in his fall, his charioteering days forgotten. While the sun was high in the sky, volley and counter-volley found their mark and men kept falling. But when the sun began to drop – towards the time when the ploughman unyokes his ox – the Greeks got the upper hand in defiance of destiny. They dragged the warrior Cebriones out from among the weapons and the yelling Trojans, and stripped the armour from his back.

(Homer, Iliad 16)

How far is this passage typical of the way heroes are depicted in the Iliad? [20]

EITHER

- 5 'In the Odyssey, there are no interesting male characters, apart from Odysseus.' To what extent do you agree with this statement? [30]

OR

- 6 Assess the importance of husband and wife relationships in both the Iliad and the Odyssey. [30]
